of the early roman catholic church were women who collected the bodies of martyred saints to give them a proper burial they have come down to us as deeply resonant symbols of grief from the women who anointed jesus s crucified body in the gospels to the pietà we are accustomed to thinking of women as natural mourners caring for the body in all its fragility and expressing our deepest sorrow but to think of women bone gatherers merely as mourners of the dead is to limit their capacity to stand for something more significant in fact denzey argues that the bone gatherers are the mythic counterparts of historical women of substance and means women who like their pagan sisters devoted their lives and financial resources to the things that mattered most to them their families their marriages and their religion we find their sometimes splendid burial chambers in the catacombs of rome but until denzey began her research for the bone gatherers the monuments left to memorialize these women and their contributions to the church went largely unexamined the bone gatherers introduces us to once powerful women who had until recently been lost to history from the sorrowing mothers and ghastly brides of pagan rome to the child martyrs and women sponsors who shaped early christianity it was often only in death that ancient women became visible through the buildings burial sites and art constructed in their memory and denzey uses this archaeological evidence along with ancient texts to resurrect the lives of several fourth century women surprisingly she finds that representations of aristocratic roman christian women show a shift in the value and significance of womanhood over the fourth century once esteemed as powerful leaders or patrons women came to be revered in an increasingly male
